CHILDREN IN THE WILDERNESS

Children in the Wilderness is an environmental and life skills educational programme that focuses on the next generation of rural decision makers. It is aimed at bridging the divide that exists between communities and wildlife. Through these programmes we teach the children the importance of conservation and strive to instil in them a passion for the environment so that they become the custodians of these wilderness areas in the future.

Children in the Wilderness runs a network of learning sanctuaries that develop leadership values in Africa's children, creating community leaders who are inspired to care for their natural heritage and can show others the way. Children in the Wilderness exposes children to their wildlife heritage, builds and strengthens their capabilities to cope with life's challenges and educates them with the life skills necessary to actualise their greatest potential.

Children in the Wilderness began with on-safari discussions between the late actor, Paul Newman, and Wilderness Safaris in August 2001. Newman's organisation, The Association of Hole in the Wall Camps and Wilderness Safaris combined forces to create a new rural African children's environmental and life skills programme. In December 2001, Children in the Wilderness ran its first successful camp in Botswana and has not looked back since.

SOUTH AFRICA

For weeks at a time, Wilderness Safaris closes its camps to paying guests and hosts rural children across seven southern African countries. We invite groups of between 16 - 45 rural children to spend five nights in camp and to take part in a life skills and environmental educational programme. The programme covers topics such as wildlife and conservation, health and nutrition, life skills, creativity and culture through participation in a variety of activities including game drives, interactive workshops, arts and crafts and various other fun but educational games. A career guidance session is also vital, where the children get to spend time with our chefs, mechanics and guides, exposing them to a range of different career options.

All of the above topics and camp interactions are underpinned with sound leadership values that include awareness, creativity, integrity, perseverance, service, focus and empathy. We believe these values are the moral fibre of all good leaders.

The outcome of the programme is a win-win for all. The children are inspired to strive to achieve their utmost potential, their enthusiasm and new ideas rub off on their families and communities – and critically threatened environments are conserved.

CHILDREN IN THE WILDERNESS

Children in the Wilderness South Africa hosts two annual camps – one at Pafuri Camp in northern Kruger National Park (for children of the Makuleke community who own the land on which Pafuri is built) and the other at Rocktail Beach Camp in the lush coastal forest of KwaZulu Natal’s iSimangaliso Wetland Park (for the children of the neighbouring KwaMqobela and KwaMpukane communities).

The curriculum covers relevant and important topics of conservation, HIV/AIDS awareness, nutrition, sustainable fishing, littering, the concepts of ‘reduce, reuse, recycle’ and ecotourism. At Rocktail Beach Camp, the children from this community face different environmental issues than those living adjacent to the Kruger Park. Over-fishing and sea pollution are some of these challenges and therefore we focus on these and similar key factors of the community and their immediate surroundings.

Apart from the camps themselves which host 70 children per annum, we also oversee the running of Environmental Clubs in the Makuleke community. We are hoping to do the same in the schools around Rocktail Beach Camp. This ensures that the learning from camp is sustained and enhanced. These clubs are run by teachers at the schools in conjunction with a community liaison and Children in the Wilderness assists with providing the curriculum, logistics, transport and materials.

"The miracle that you have done to me I will never forget in my whole life forever. I want to say don't stop what you are doing. Go on please. Take care of the children that are coming next year and show them all that you showed us and teach them what you taught us."

H Manganyi – Children in the Wilderness Participant.
